from the New York Times:

noon last. We glean the tollowing particulars

It appears that Charles Johnson, Robert Johnson, William Johnson, Patrick McDonough, and James Campbell had been spending the evening together at the house of Thomas Johnson (a brother of the other Johnsons named), on Lafayette street, near Raymond. Robert Johnson is in the employ of Mr. Heath, the contractor on Clove road, and lives at Bedford. Soon after 12 o'clock he started for home. All of the parties named as being in his party walked with him to Raymond street, where, after some little as it was a pleasant night, to walk part of the way home with Robert. All assented to it but they discovered three men (subsequently found to be named Michael McGorman, Michael Mc-Gee, and Patrick Sorley) extended across the gutter, face downward, and feet extended in the street. Seeing a new pair of boots near them and supposing them to be sleeping off the ef fects of strong drink, one of the party remarked, "Somebody will steal those boots; we had better start them home, or the M. P.'s will take them in." Acting upon this suggestion, they attempted to arouse the men by shaking them, and then by rubbing their ears, but only succeeded in arousing McGorman, who, springing up suddenly, said he would go home for nobody, drew a knife from his pocket, and thrust it several times into Charles Johnson, inflicting punctured wounds of the abdomen and pleura, nates, and arm, from the effects of which he died in a few

THE NEWS FROM THE CRIMEA .- The intelligence brought by the steamer America and published under our telegraphic head is important, and we confess that we receive the information of the defeat of the allies in the Crimea with mixed emotions of grief and satisfaction. We regard the war, which they are waging upon Russia, as unnecessary, unjust, and aggressive. It is unnecessary because the terms on which Russia offered to make peace were fair and honorable, and ought to have been accepted. It is unjust because it was unprovoked on the part of Russia. It is aggressive because the allies boldly avow that their purpose is to cripple the power of Russia, and to limit the extension of her empire.

But, while we admit all this to be true, we also admit that we have no wish to see England and France prostrated by the power of Russia. It would be an unfortunate day for human progress and christian civilization that should place the allies at the mercy of Russia. What we do desire to see is the restoration of peace to Europe on a fair and proper basis; we should not care if the effete dynasty of the Sultans were terminated by a partition of the Turkish territory among the christian powers of Western Eu-

If the recent defeat of the allied armies shall have the effect to lower the tone of the French and English Governments and constrain them to make peace on reasonable terms, it will be well for them, and well for the cause of humanity in all Europe. But we confess we have little hope of such a result. The pride of the allies will probably revolt at the humilitation of negotiating under the influence of what they probably ing under the influence of what they probably esteem a temporary reverse, and they will make efforts to retrieve their losses. The news by the next steamer will be looked for with great interest by everybody in this country.

CHEERING .- On the night of the Fourth of July, a good many of our fellow-citizens, whose patriotism was too exuberant to be repressed, arrayed themselves before our office and gave "three cheers for the genuine American paper." Then they gave three in the loudest sort of style for our senior editor. Then they gave three for Col. Marshall. Then they gave three more for our senior editor. Then they gave three for the American party-then three for the American candidate for Governor-and then three more for our senior editor. We suppose they knew that our senior was not in his office, and so they made the cheers for him loud enough to be heard by him wherever he might be, either in the city or in the adjacent country.

The disease made its appearance in our city on Tuesday, the 25th ult., and up to the present time there have been eighteen deaths. As is usual, upon the first appearance of this disease, most of the first cases proved fatal in a short time; but within a day or two past it has, in a great measure, lost its malignity. INDIAN OFFICE.—Interesting Information from the Superintendent of Indian Affairs for the Territory of New Mexico.—By a letter from Territory of New Mexico.—By a letter from the superintendent of Indian affairs for the Territory of New Mexico, dated Santa Fe, May 28, 1855, we are in receipt of information that a "talk" has been held by Col. Miles, of the U. army, with the chiefs of the Mascalero tribe of the Apache nation, in which the Indians made application for peace. In the course of the "talk," one of the chiefs said that some of the Jicarillas tribe were living in the mountains who wanted peace, but were afraid to come in. They are believed to be sincere in their application, and the 9ih of June has been appointed by the superintendent of Indian affairs to meet these Indians, and, in connection with them, the Gila Apaches. Information has also been received that there have been several severe skirmishes between United States troops and the hostile Utahs and in the defendant's hands, for money collected by Jicarillas during the present month (May), in which the Indians have suffered severely. The official report shows a loss on the part of the Utahs of between forty and fifty killed, many wounded, and six children made captive. The loss of the Jicarillas is less—being stated at sevulose the direction of the Department at 1850, under the direction of the 1850, under the direction of the 2850, under th en killed, a large number wounded, and four prisoners. SERIOUS AFFAIR IN BAXTER STREET .- Sunday night being very hot, not a few people in the city ascended to the roofs of their residences to sleep, a custom much in practice during the sul-try weather. On that evening several Italians, with their wives and children, occupying a por-tion of the premises 264 Baxter street, as they had done on various other occasions, lay down on the top of the house and went to sleep. About 1½ o'clock A. M., however, they were disturbed by the intrusion of three young fellows giving their names as John and Thomas Wilson, brothers, and Daniel Flannigan, who commenced using abusive and indecent language, and, worse than all, took improper liberties with several of the females. They were remonstrated with and requested to quit their abuse and leave. This they refused to do, and renewed their interferors with the wives of the leave. terference with the wives of the Italians. This was no longer to be endured, and John Bouton and Joseph Pendleton, organ players, to protect their families from further insult, got up, as is alleged, and stabbed the two Wilsons in the side and abdomen, in the most frightful manner.

They were at once conveyed to the New York Hospital, where they now lie in a most critical condition. The attending physician has but little hope of their recovery. Flannigan was also stabbed, but it is thought not dangerously. He also was conveyed to the Hospital for treatment. Search was immediately made for the Italians who are charged with using their beings with who are charged with using their knives with such terrible effect, but they had decamped or at least left the roof. They, however, were found at home, yesterday afternoon, and arrested by officers Donohue and Bradley of the Sixth Ward Police.

JEFFERSONVILLE RAILROAD .- We learn that the committee on the part of the Jeffersonville Railroad Company, consisting of John Zulauf, D. Ricketts, W. O. Rockwood, and A. P. Osborne, Esqs, returned from Indianapolis some days ago without having been able to effect any new running arrangement with the Madison and Indianapolis Railroad Company, such as was proposed by that company some months ago. If this is the fact, as we presume it is, we should like to see our citizens come forward and assist the Jeffersonville Company to complete their road, independent of the Magison road, to Indianapolis. To do this requires only the laying down of a track thirty miles, from Edinburg to Indianapolis. This city already has a large interest in the Jeffersonville road, and sound policy requires that more money shall be expended in perfecting that work. Money expended in culate what company this way would doubtless be profitably invested, as it would enable the Company to increase its business and enlarge the capacities of the road to bring trade and travel to this place.

Dickinson, George N. Saunders, Lieut. Col. Bragg, and Senator Bright (by the way, have you noticed if Barnum has advertised any intent to add prize-porkers to prize-poultry and prize-babies?), all to appear in the sterling comedy of "Capiat qui capere po-test," as the learned Doboobius hath it; while at the Academy of Music were to appear those foreign temptations, Mde De LaGrange, Mde Vries, Signori Mirate and Morelli, zart's opera of Don Giovanni. Dare I own to you, stern native, which way I decided? that turned a deaf ear to the charming of Young America through the dulcet tones of those little giants by whose idiosyncracies I had so often been amused in the galleries of the Capitol, and, ungrateful that I am, wended my way to the opdra, with a handsome young man on one side and an elderly lady on the other, to make sure that no memories of past patriotism should lead me to stop short of Fourteenth street East? good demon, however, favored me, for not only did I reach the Academy in safety, but learned this morning that so many of the great men of the comedy "regretted," as to leave the expected glory dwindled to a rushlight.

But the opera—ah you should have seen and heard the glories of that night—seen some four thousand people, possibly more, decorating the spacious amphitheatre—seen the undulations of full two thousand fans, many of them grasped by such taper, milky fingers that you would have wondered how they could sustain even a fan; and then, dazzled by the beauty of the hands and the brilliancy of the diamonds on them, you would have looked straight into the gas-light to rest your eyes: you should have seen the grace-ful shoulders and throats, the fine heads (a beauty conceded par excellence to our country-women), the glossy hair wrea'hed with flowers and ribbands; seen how bright eyes sparked and rosy lips smiled and fair hands even applauded and pitched bouquets at him sang Il meo tesoro—why you would have thought that every pretty woman had been previously informed that he would sing it especially at her-

But coming to the music I must speak seriously; how classical without being cold, how rich and graceful, how free from all the mistaken extravagancies which too often supply the place of musical inspiration; how delicious it is to feast on the composer's genius, instead of iistening to unmeaning combinations which you know were thrown together to exhibit the range of a certain voice, or the ease with which it can run the scales. The voice of Mde De La Grange (as Zerlina) sounded much richer than in any part she has sung here, simply because it was not exhausted in those wanderings among the very clouds of the gamut, which are cer-tainly wonderful, and most flute-like, but can never be expressive. Her acting with Don Juan wanted character, but her Scena with Massetto was very good, and then 'tis so rare to have a prima donna whose figure is slender and grace-ful. The Times thinks Morelli was not rollicking enough for the Don; well, the Times is authority, and I am not, but, do you consider that a Don Giovanni is a "rollicking" fellow? Saving the Lieut. Governor's reverence, I opine that a handsome Italian like Morelli has a handsome Italian like Morelli h deuced deal clearer conception of the character. Rosa DeVries sang and acted Donna Ana with taste and spirit. The pathetic and earnest style of her music is in exquisite contrast with that of the peasant-girl; as is also the laughing reciof the peasant-girl, as is also the laughing reci-tative in the cemetery between Leporello and Don Juan, with the martial and solemn notes of the commandant, by which they are interrupted. If anything could make me believe in ghosts it would be those thrilling, supernatural tones; and, truth to tell, in this, and the final scene, I really felt cool, despite the excessive warmth of the weather, the gas, and the crowded state of the house. Gasparoni rendered the statue of the commander most skillfully, and there was nothing throughout that one could find fault with, save the inartistic change in the denouement. Not that I particularly desire to see the devil fly off with the Don bodily, but because the sinking of the Statue, a blaze of red light at the side, and the exit of Don Giovanni, cen-

With "Don Giovanni" ended a truly brilliant with "bon Grovanin" ended a truly brilliant and successful operatic experiment of some four months, satisfactory to audience and artists. We have had two companies, both choice, and I hope the interest they have excited will be the means of creating more and a higher class of musical taste here and elsewhere.

Tis some three weeks, I think, since you came and left like-like a Native Americanand that's a pretty fast simile. Since then, Ju-piter Pluvius has seemed to be the presiding Deity, and has visited us as wrathfully as if all the pretty girls were dead, until within three days; we are now undergoing the opposite extreme, and are gasping like fish out of water.

The glorious Fourth approaches: oh for a re-treat where powder and patriotism are not known as synonymous terms! But I fear there is no lodge in any vast wilderness this side of the Rocky mountains where such bliss of ignor-ance may be realized. A diving bell is the only thing that seems like a refuge, and even that would not avail unless we could stand it fortyeight hours. Spasmodic assaults of crackers have occurred for several days past, and the Fourth—"pity me, but don't speak to me!" I hoped by this time to have been in the country, but I wait for a friend, and the friend waits for some matter of bu iness, and so we go, or rather Talking of guns, I've not heard anything amazing of Mr. Wise, since the Wise demonstration in our Park, marshalled under Rynders & Co. Well, when a man undertakes to witch the world with political summersets, the arena is so vast and so slippery that he can't well calculate what company he may get into. Virginia was duly congratulated at the late meeting, but had any one prophesied such things to the member from Accomac in the days of hs "youthful chivalry," how would his ire have burned! By the way, Mike Walsh was among the great men missing on Wednesday evening. He was much wanted, and I fear some insidious foe had managed to give him that one more glass, "to make him as drunk as he ought to be," and deprive the meeting of the benefits of

It was just my luck to hear of it a minute too late. do love German singing-it is so earnest, so hearty, and always correct; and the German voices, exercised so much in the open air, are so pure and full. To have seen the crowds of men women, and children (even to the baby) thronging to and from the ferry for Elm Park on Tuesday, a stranger would have fancied himself in a German city, and these good people looked as happy returning as in going, for though beer was plenty I believe there was nothing worse; no triumphs of chemical science mixed with alcohol, under various denominations, to set their brains on fire, consequently no broken heads, no dirking, &c. And yet here

You are tired of these nothings? So am I; yet were some fifteen thousand you are not so absurd as to expect com brains to retain anything worth while and the thermometer at 93 in the shade.

PROTEUS.

An Amusing Affair.—The richest affair that we have heard of for a "month of Sundays" is related in the following from the last number of the St. Louis Evening Mirror:

THE HERALD AND MR. BENNETT .extraordinary event has recently brought one of our cotemporaries before the public in an aspect far from enviable. It seems that the Morning Herald, for two successive Sundays, has contained stanzas, after the Don Juan model, both in verse and sentiment, skillfully written and faultlessly constructed, but containing, so it was supposed, direct reference to the character and supposed, direct reference to the character and virtue of female members of a highly respectable family in this city. When the first of the series appeared, it seems that Mr. Bennett, of the firm of Russell & Bennett, believing that the publication contained aspersions against his family, called upon the editor of the Herald, P. G. Ferguson, who declared that such was not the case. On last Sunday the Herald appeared with a second number of the series, and with Mr. Ferguson's disavowal that the publication had reference to Mr. Bennett's family. The last of the series of stanzas certainly contained insinuations, if not, indeed, positive charges of an intrigue between some lady and her lover; but who was the lady or the lover, we were at the time we read them at a loss to divine, nor should we, unaided, have ever been able to

We are disposed to believe Ferguson's statement in his paper, that the subject was a fanciful one, had no particular local or personal refer-ence, and least of all did we imagine that it could apply to a lady of unblemished reputation or respectable standing. We have great confi-dence in female purity, and especially in that of against his family. This, we believe, from all we can ascertain, is the state in which the matter stood on Sunday last.

Yesterday morning a rumor prevailed that Mr. Ferguson had been cowhided by Mr. Bennett, on the night previous. The Evening News of that day contained the following publication, which we subjoin:

I ask the publication of the following card, in anticipation of its appearance in the Republi-can to-morrow. It explains itself. I will add, that, after the execution of this paper, I went to Mr. Ferguson's room, and there inflicted per-Mr. Ferguson's room, and the state of the sonal chastisement upon him.

W. BENNETT.

To the Editor of the Missouri Republican:

ST. Louis, Sunday, July 1, 1855. I hereby certify that Mr. W. Bennett called on us yesterday, and demanded a retraction of the article headed "High Life in St. Louis," and which I promised to make in the Herald of this morning. I did give the retraction in my daily, but, by an oversight on my part, it did not appear in the Sunday Herald, which was contrary o my intentions, and my promise to Mr. B was thereby violated.

The poem I am author of, and not knowing the NENVE of the party alluded to, I now see I have presumed too much; and though my sole object was to promote the circulation of my paper, there not being the least ground for any such allusion, I hereby retract, and pledge myself HEREAFTER that nothing shall appear in the Herald derogatory to the PRIVATE CHARACTER of any citizen of St. Louis. This statement I make in justice to Mr. Bennett, and from the fear of consequences, as well now as hereafter. I am aware that Mr. Bennett, with his family, had made arrangements to leave for the East long before the poem was commenced .-Therefore, his absence will not be construed as avoiding any imputations the poem way seem to imply, as he leaves to-morrow, and will be at home within two weeks; and as I know him to be a man who will do all he has promised, I hereby retract what I admit to be an attempt at slander. I pledge myself further that this shall be published in my next daily, and in the next Sunday Herald.

P. G. FERGUSON. P. S. Mr. Bennett has called on me at my room at 10 o'clock, P. M., and has assured me the came to give me a cowhiding. I have begged that he would not do it, though I admit I am deserving of even more, as I have assailed his family without cause, willfully and maliciously.

that I fully understand every word, and endorse the justice of the demands made of me. Hence repeated signatures.

P. G. FERGUSON, Editor of Herald. Comment from us is unnecessary, and we now add the statement of Mr. Ferguson, which appeared in this morning's Herald:

To THE PUBLIC. - Erroneous reports being in circulatian relative to the affair between W Bennett and myself, I deem it an act of to make a brief statement of the circum as they occurred, leaving the public to 'ji the matter, and decide upon the conduct

mr. Bennett saw proper to make a per application of a poem published in the Hera day or two ago, and on Saturday called at the office for an explanation. I gave written statement disavowing all reference in the statement disavowing all refe himself or family, and he expressed himself is fied. I thought the matter was settled, an Sunday's Herald made the same retraction. Sunday night, about 11 o clock, Mr. Bei came to my room where I was sick in bed, requested me to sign a written statement whe he had brought with him. I glanced over and being unable to read more than a portion it, I signed it. Mr. Bennett then added two three postscripts, which I also signed. He the left, apparently satisfied. Between 12 and o'clock, at night, he returned in company wit a man who he said was a porter. After som few words, Mr. B. declared his intention to ap ply to my shoulders a carriage whip which he had in his hand. I told him I was sick, scarcely able to sit up in bed, and warned him to beware of the consequences. With a revolver in one hand, and the porter standing by with his right hand in his pocket (evidently grasping a weapon of some kind), Mr B. then proceeded to apply the whip. By holding up the bed-clothes, I avoided the blows, but he seemed content with held-size the size of the seemed content with held-size the seemed content with belaboring the quits, and as I felt no pain from the infliction, I was content to escape so well. After striking about a dozen blows, the two worthies left, and I went to sleep. So quietly was the affair conducted, that my roommate, who was asleep in the same room, was not awakened from his nap. This is a correct version of the circumstance.

My friends desire to know why I submitted to such an indignity. My reply is, that, being helplessly sick, I had not the strength to resist. I have abandoned my determination to seek revenge for the cowardly act, for several reasons—one of which is, that Mr. Bennett considered that he was defending the honor of his family, and I respect the man who strikes in defence of his wife and children, though the act may be wrong and cowardly. Another reason was, I felt that I had—though without intending it -done Mr. B. a wrong; if I had not thought so, I never would have offered an apology, or submitted to the indignity.

If Mr. Bennett is satisfied with his display of valor in attacking a sick man in bed, aided by an armed menial, he is welcome to his laurels For myself, I do not boast of any great nerve or courage; yet if Mr. Bennett or any other man desires to put me to the test, let him meet me upon equal grounds, and he will find that I will not flinch. Here I leave the matter, hoping it may rest, and that Mr. Bennett's good sense will teach him more prudence in future

P. G. FERGUSON. P. S. The statement in the Evening News over my signature, was extorted from me whilst lying upon a sick bed. I did not fully under-stand the contents of the paper when I signed it (having been written by Bennett), and I now repudiate the whole statement, and am prepared to meet the consequences.

REMARKABLE ESCAPE FROM DEATH .- WE have been furnished with the particulars of an exciting scene which transpired in the township of Columbia, Lorain county, on Saturday, 30th ultimo, which should operate as a caution against descending into wells in any instance, before taking means, by lowering a lighted candle, to ascertain the presence of choke damp, or carbonic acid gas.

A lad about fifteen, named Jarvis Noble, descended into the well of his grandfather, Wm. E. Smith, to recover a bucket which had fallen, and when part way down he reached the nox-ious gas and instantly fell to the bottom, where were four feet of water. An alarm given by two lads, who were watching Jarvis over the curb, drew the family from the supper table. On seeing the dying condition of the boy, his un-cle, Wm. A. Smith, entered the well, being let down by the windlass, and found Jarvis in an up-right position, leaning against the wall, with his the St. Louis ladies, and we should never have applied the poetic sketch of the Herald to any lady in this city.

From the title, or from some other indications, Mr. Bennett deemed the stanzas to contain a slanderous and grossly false accusation.

This we believe from all Calvis Smith a brother of William A., in the well without any rope, but had got down but a few feet when, inhaling the gas, he fell to the bottom. The father, Mr. Wm. E. Smith, then entered the well to rescue his son and grandson, being let down by a rope tied beneath his arms.

The curb was knocked away to give the rope length enough to enable Mr. S. to reach the two bodies, and the father succeeded in getting an extra rope around his son Calvin, but could an extra rope around his son Calvin, but could not tie it before the gas overcame him, and the three seemed dying together. Those above—for Mr. Thos. Peachy, William Nichols, and other neighbors, had rallied—called to the elder Mr. Smith, but he was speechless; and drawing upon the rope which held him, they raised the father and son together—the grasp of the former upon the rope that passed exound the latter was the rope that passed around the latter was a death-clutch—but before getting to the mouth of the well, the rope slipped through the hands of the father and Calvin fell heavily back into the water, and the father was drawn out sense-less, yet alive. Then William A. Smith, having recovered from the effects of his first descent, went down a second time, having a rope fastened to his body, and was enabled to pass another around his brother Calvin.

At this time Jarvis had been in the well an At this time Jarvis had been in the well an half hour, and as the rope was passed around Calvin, from some cause—probably the agitation of the water partially lifted the noxious gas from its surface—Jarvis revived sufficiently to make one struggle for life, and climbing up Calvin's back got hold of the rope, and the three were drawn upward When half-way up, and about twelve feet from the mouth, Thomas Peachey was let down by a rope and succeeded in fastening another rope round the lad Jarvis, and all were finally one by one drawn from the well. We are glad to know that those who suffered from the gas are all recovering. We suppose the agitation of the water prevented a to-tal extinction of life. It is a fact worthy of note, that the young man, Jarvis Noble, entered the well about two weeks since and thoroughly cleaned it. The extinguishment of a lighted candle, or torch, or any other flame, is a sure indicator of the presence of carbonic acid gas. Cleveland Herald
